Illiterate voters in Irish boroughs in 1837

Sample Report | Membership Benefits | Join Now

In the 2002 edition of Familia: Ulster Genealogical Review there is an article entitled 'British Parliamentary Papers and the local historian and genealogist' the aim of which is to highlight the range of information contained in the papers and its value for local and family history research. One of the most valuable of those papers is the First report from the select committee on fictitious votes, Ireland of 1837. The order appointing this committee was issued on 6 February 1837. The committee's remit was to 'inquire how far the intentions of the Reform Bill are defeated by creating and registering fictitious and improper votes in Ireland' and its chairman was Lord G. C. H. Somerset. One of the first orders issued by the committee was for a 'return of the several persons registered in the several boroughs in Ireland who have subscribed their affidavits for registry as marksmen'. A marksman was an illiterate voter. The returns for each borough were prepared over the course of the next month and were presented to the committee on 16 March 1837.

These returns are printed in Appendix A of the report under item no. 3. Produced here are the returns of the boroughs for which personal names are given. A total of 1,367 names are listed altogether, although a number of these are duplicates. The towns including personal names are Armagh, Athlone, Bandon, Belfast, Cashel, Clonmel, Coleraine, Downpatrick, Drogheda, Dundalk, Ennis, Enniskillen, Kinsale, Lisburn, Newry, Portarlington, Sligo, Tralee, Wexford and Youghal.

1728 Hertford Estate Rent Roll

[NB The family did not use the name Hertford until the creation of the first Marquis in 1750.]

Sir Fulke Conway was granted the manors of Killultagh and Derryvolgie in South Antrim in the early seventeenth century. The land passed through his brother Edward to the Hertford family. The 1728 rent roll for the manors covers much of the land in the parishes of Blaris [including the town of Lisburn], Lambeg, Derriagh, Magheragall, Magheramesk, Aghalee, Aghagallon, Glenavy, Camlin and Tullyrusk and contains over 1300 names of tenants.

There are, however, some difficulties which make it impossible to extract an accurate list of tenant names with their townland addresses since the rental was not set out fully or systematically by townlands. In some parts of the rental the tenant names are listed by townland but over much of the rental tenant names are grouped in divisions which are named 'farms' or have names which cannot be satisfactorily explained by reference to contemporary [estate maps] or later documents. In some parts of the rental a mixture of townland and other divisions are both used. In Lisburn town many of the tenants are listed under street names but there are other tenants listed under names which appear to have been part of the demesne, e.g. Lord's Meadow, Cow Pasture, and garrison, e.g. Trooper's Field. Piper Hill was named after a soldier piper who died defending the town during the 1641 Rebellion.

A number of tenant names occur in two or more townlands both within a parish and also in other parishes. Most of these duplications of names result from tenant holdings crossing townland and/or parochial boundaries. There is also a small number of tenants with holdings in well separated townlands and parishes and it would seem probable that most of the holdings were sublet. There is also a small number of major tenants holding large acreages which they sublet and the names of those sub tenants unfortunately do not appear in the rental. This would account for the absence of tenant names for a number of townlands in each parish.

Maghaberry townland is included in Magheragall parish in the rental but it has been placed in the extracted lists in Magheramesk Parish to which it belongs. Ballynalargy townland is divided between Magheragall and Magheramesk parishes but all tenant names were listed in the rental under Magheragall parish. Although the parishes of Camlin and Tullyrusk were united to Glenavy parish prior to 1728 the tenant names for both parishes have been listed separately below. Despite these difficulties the Hertford estate rent rolls form a most valuable genealogical resource listing over 1300 names, almost all by townland, from the early eighteenth century.
